Need More Wifi Coverage?

With the expansion of Wifi connected devices, the need for better Wifi coverage throughout homes is only going to keep increasing. If you are finding that your Wifi signal isn't consistent through your whole home, it may be time to make some changes. While we think routers are pretty cool looking, we understand that most people prefer to keep them out of sight. Sometimes just moving the router location can improve your Wifi signal, but that may not help if Wifi interference or not enough coverage is the problem. Many think that the answer can be found in the shape of a store bought Wifi signal repeater. Don't waste your money. Store bought Wifi repeaters simply re-broadcast your existing signal, which can slow things down, add lag, and even create interference. This is like making your internet run a relay race instead of a sprint. They often use the same wireless channel to send and receive data, cutting speeds, increasing buffering, and forcing devices to hang on to a weak signal unless you manually switch networks.

There is a better option! Our Wifi mesh units work differently. They communicate with each other over Ethernet, freeing up Wifi to focus on your devices. The result is faster and more reliable speeds, lower lag for streaming and video calls, and seamless roaming as you move room to room. No dropped connections, no guessing which network to join. Plus, we manage all of the updates and install them for free! If you think your home could benefit from better Wifi coverage, give the Solution Center a call, 873-5711, and we can look at your circuit and see if Wiatel's Wifi Mesh Units are good option for your home.
